Headline:
Turning drier and warmer.

Today:
Low cloud and patchy rain in the northeast will be replaced by scattered heavy showers inland here. Mostly dry with sunny spells elsewhere and feeling warmer than recently.

Tonight:
Showers over Scotland, northern and eastern England dying out leaving a chilly night with good clear spells and a few fog patches likely.

Thursday:
Dry and fine for the vast majority with good sunny spells and feeling warmer again. A chance of one or two showers in the east. Rain later for Northern Ireland.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Early rain in the Northwest on Friday, then mainly dry with spells of warm sunshine. Cloud and rain in the far Northwest by the end of Sunday.
